*"The rich man, Mister Astor. Kissed his darling wife.
He had no way of knowing. It'd be the last trip of his life..."*

Welcome to another edition of the Bob Cats Newsletter. It's night time in the big city. Main Street's crowded, it's a warm night, people dressed in bright colours stray and swarm. The chaplain without a parish is standing on the corner in a dark torn suit drinking gin from a paper coffeecup listening to a thin gypsy thief playing a bandoneon, singing sephardic love songs to passers by. On the 5th floor of the Watergate warehouse, the night watchman hops around on crutches reading a shotgun manual. Across the street in room #507 of the St. James Hotel a woman is patiently waiting sitting on the bed in a nurse's uniform meditating on an empty bandoneon case. A street car named Destiny goes by, inside the big guy and the cracked actor discuss the future of The Black Swan, though not boarded up, is yet still closed for repair and all the furniture is in a heap on the street.

FLASHES FROM THE PAST

Forgetful heart
Lost your power of recall
Every little detail
You don't remember at all
The times we knew
Who would remember better then you

Forgetful heart
We laughed and had a good time you and I
It's been so long
Now you're content to let the days go by
When you were there
You were the answer to my prayer

GOOD NIGHT

Good night is hard to say
The night itself won't leave us alone
Darkness all around

Forgetful heart
We loved with all the love that life can give
What can I say
Without you it's so hard to live
Can't take much more
Why can't we love like we did before

Forgetful heart
Like a walking shadow in my brain
All night long
I lay awake and listen to the sound of pain
The door has closed forevermore
If indeed there ever was a door

Mosquitos halos our heads
A distant jukebox's playing soft
But it's really nothing, nothing to turn off
