CELEBRATING THE ART AND THE MANY LIVES OF BOB DYLAN • NOBEL PRIZE LAUREATE SONG & DANCE MAN

ESTABLISHED 2006 BY PETER HOLST • 10TH YEAR AND RUNNING.

Welcome to another edition of the Bob Cats Newsletter. It's night time in the big city and a night nurse, redhead, thin and tall, awaiting her shift has a straight cup of black coffee and a cigarillo at the Fargo Café on Main Street. A drizzling hail taps on the store window, falling soft like sinking ships in a feverish dream, tobacco smoke rising, dissolving among fake chandeliers. A street car named Carmel stops in the tracks, windshield wipers moving to and fro as the sky explodes like a giant down bed pillow shot to pieces spreading its feathers, four sheets to the wind encasing vehicles and streets in white. The kid's huddling in a doorway, black dog by his side. The night nurse stubs out her Chesterfield, picks up her Burberry and leaves. A wind from Africa settles reducing the hail storm to a wet steaming sheen underneath a bluish sky as the flowers of the night wake up from their slumber.

FLASHES FROM THE PAST

The river whispers in my ear,
a hardly penny to my name.
The heavens never seemed so near.
All of my body glows with flame.

The tempest struggles in the air,
and to myself alone I sing.
It could sink me then and there,
I can hear the echoes ring.

I try to find one smilin' face
to drive the shadows from my head.
I'm stranded in this nameless place,
lyin' restless in a heavy bed.

Tell me straight out if you will.
Why must you torture me within?
Why must you come down from your high hill, throw my fate to the clouds and wind?

Far away in a silent land
secret thoughts are hard to bear
Remember me you'll understand
Emotions we can never share

You trampled on me as you passed,
Left the coldest kiss upon my brow.
All my doubts and fears have gone at last.
I've nothing more to tell you now.

GOOD NIGHT

An unquiet mind in turbulent times can make a quiet man rage against his better self.
A satisfied mind in time of peace can make a sluggard of a busy bee.
A mind out of time in the company of gods is a hamlet in the valley of the poor.
Out of sight and out of mind, lost for now, soon to be found, your tree of wisdom withering with age
