Welcome to another edition of the Bob Cats Newsletter. It's night time in the big city and there's music from Clinton Street, a cab stops outside the Saint James Hotel and doctor Winterstein steps out of it, sways across the sidewalk in a rented tuxedo, doctor's bag and a rolled up umbrella in his hands, Moroccan fez on the back of his head balancing through the entrance, cakewalking through the lobby reaching the elevators, pushes 5th floor and leans exhausted against the wall, wheezing Cohibas and Courvoisier, whispering: The blues is in the bottle and I'm gonna kill it'.

FLASHES FROM THE PAST

When I set my eyes on you
Gonna keep you outta town at night
When I set my eyes on you
Not gonna be outta my sight

And now you know
Everywhere on Earth you go
You're gonna have me as your man

When I get my hands on you
Gonna make you carry me
When I get my hands on you
Gonna make you marry me

And now you know
Everywhere on Earth you go
You're gonna have me as your man

GOOD NIGHT

You smell like jail
You look like hell
I step aback and draw a line
You're in my blood like turpentine
It gets me everytime.

You feed on fear
You die a little
I run for cover in the sun
You're in my heart like hummingbirds
It gets me all the time

When I come home to you
Gonna take you down to the riverside
When I come home to you
Hold you in my arms all night

And now you know
Everywhere on Earth you go
You're gonna have me as your man
And now you know
Everywhere on Earth you go
You're gonna have me as your man
