Welcome to another edition of the Bob Cats Newsletter. It's night time in the big city. Zaccheus Patterson, safecracker, Vietnam veteran, mad, bad and dangerous to know, now a born-again Christian's rambling up and down Beaver Street in the red-light district in a military coat, torn and tattered searching for sinners and Zealots, higglers and hookers, ending up outside The Black Swan in a fire-and-brimstone deliverance holding on to a lamp post in a dog's breath you could hang your hat upon; Woe to you sinners and hypocrites! You are like whitewashed tombs, beautiful on the outside but inside full of the bones of the dead... He's interrupted by Georg Belatoni, the bartender, stepping out offering him a glass of red wine. He sits down by an outdoor table in the warm night, enjoying the coming of spring. Cracked actor Cornwell, the tenor of his time, by the bar inside The Black Swan jots down some notes on time, temper and tolerance in modern society on a piece of paper. Being served another shot of De Kuypers Apricot Brandy he crumples the note and throws it into the fireside. Papa Celestin & The Original Tuxedo Jazz Band are on the juke box: Hey little girl watcha' gonna do? Hey little girl watcha' gonna do? Better go home and tell your mama what daddy done to you...

GOOD NIGHT

She was not an angel fair and good
He was in the deep end of the swimming pool
She didn't care to check the oil under the hood
He woke up gagged and tied to a stool
She turned the screws on his sacred harp
He heard the fifth go from a flat to a sharp
