Welcome to another edition of the Bob Cats Newsletter. It's night time in the big city. A viper green Porsche Carrera comes to a full stop outside The Saint James Hotel. Its characteristic sound goes off with a whisper and the doors open letting out cracked actor Cornwell, adjusting his midnight blue velvet tuxedo, stroking a skimpy waxed-up pompadour, entering the building, heading for the Lincoln Room. Pietrangolina Buttafuoco, racing driver and femme fatale, gets out and saunters inside, stripping out of red Ferrari overalls in the lobby revealing a light grey pant suit. Georg Balatoni, night porter, checks in her attire, calling the bell boy half asleep on a stool by the elevator. There's a wedding taking place. Jacques Reilly and Clara Barrow are tying the knot. Jacques has put Clara in the pudding club. She's put him straight. Backstage, Zid the Kid in a saffron suit's fixing the torch, fumbling with a gas lighter behind the wine-red curtain. Lambert's warming up his trumpet, Charles' wetting the reed on his clarinet. Music sheet on a stand flickers in the stream of the AC. Father McKenzie's lost in the kitchen area, looking for a door leading to the Lincoln Room, Bible in hand, slipping and sliding in grease and oil on black and white clinkers, clinging to Fidel the cook, landing in the arms of Veronika Orsini, cold-buffet manageress, reciting the wedding vows he's learned by heart, experiencing her warm body giving off promises from a long forgotten secret garden. The night nurse finds him in a blessed state, leads him into the humming room, gets him on the stage, signals for the band to play. The curtain rises, the torch's lit and the sound of music clears the mind and heart of the wedding couple, fairly sober, raged by lust and regret.

FLASHES FROM THE PAST

Well you're comin' down High Street, walkin' in the sun
You make the dead man rise and holler she's the one
Jolene, Jolene
Baby, I am the king and you're the queen

Well it's a long old highway, don't ever end
I've got a Saturday night special, I'm back again
I'll sleep by your door, lay my life on the line
You probably don't know, but I'm gonna make you mine
Jolene, Jolene
Baby, I am the king and you're the queen

I keep my hands in my pocket, I'm movin' along
People think they know, but they're all wrong
You're something nice, I'm gonna grab my dice
If I can do it once, I can do it twice
Jolene, Jolene
Baby, I am the king and you're the queen

Well I found out the hard way, I've had my fill
You can't find somebody with his back to a hill
Those big brown eyes, they set off a spark
When you hold me in your arms things don't look so dark
Jolene, Jolene
Baby, I am the king and you're the queen

(Jolene • Bob Dylan & Robert Hunter)

GOOD NIGHT

And the wild tales of foreign lands stomping at your garden gate
Begging for charity, asking for sympathy eating out your heart
Is this for real, a vision or a dream, a broken soul, a crazed state
In low, sweet, tremulous tones, she whispers leaving on your face a scar
Bright and bold and hardened, could this be the new design?
Wisdom, love in polished form, grown in quality as with the first of wine
